Eudora 3.0

Eudora is a freeware mail client written in C++ and licensed under the GNU General Public License. Eudora is based on the widely used open source project Netscape's Mail application, which in turn is based on the open source project Mosaic.

Eudora differs from the Netscape and Mosaic email clients in that it is not an HTML-based browser but rather an email client using a proprietary file format called Eudora Mail. Because of this, Eudora's design is similar to that of the PC-based text editor notepad.

PIE Quarterly will take place in the storied basement of PIE Philadelphia, at 302 South 9th St, in the former rehearsal space of The Decemberists. The quarterly will be $10 a copy and will be published digitally in March, July, and October, and print copies will be available for purchase the last Saturday of each month. I love comics. I love video games. I love reading. This seemed like an idea that would be a fun way to combine all three into a regularly-published magazine. And so, PIE Quarterly was born. I'm going to be the editor, and I'll be doing the drawing, design, writing, and all that stuff. And so far, there's a good
