Additional to other answers, SeaMonkey also comes with a BitTorrent client and a RSS aggregator. Factor V L2065R mutation in Caucasian patients with type 2/3 VWD. Von Willebrand disease (VWD) is an inherited disorder characterized by low levels of von Willebrand factor (VWF), due to decreased synthesis of VWF and/or increased clearance of VWF. Type 2 VWD is caused by mutations in exon 28 of the VWF gene (VWF:c.2890_2894del15) and/or exon 28 of the platelet glycoprotein Ib (GP1balpha) gene (GP1balpha:c.1732G>T), or both. Platelet-derived VWF and not plasma-derived VWF is deficient in type 2 VWD and is increased in type 3 VWD. The aim of this study is to investigate the frequency of Factor V Leiden L2065R mutation in VWD Caucasian patients. Factor V Leiden mutation, R506Q mutation in GP1balpha and type 2 VWD phenotype were investigated in 58 patients with type 2/3 VWD (30 patients with type 2, 28 patients with type 3 and 40 patients with type 2/3). In type 2/3 VWD patients, a population based frequency of the Factor V Leiden mutation was estimated to be 9.7% (95% CI 3.2-19.3%). The prevalence of Factor V Leiden L2065R mutation in type 2/3 VWD Caucasian patients is significantly higher than in the general Caucasian population, which could have relevant implications in the management of these patients. The Platelet receptor pathway is a key pathway in the pathogenesis of VWD. The elucidation of the impact of factors along this pathway on the clinical manifestation of VWD can lead to the development of novel strategies aimed at selectively modulating this pathway to treat patients with type 2/3 VWD.Q: I have installed a web hosting package but I cannot login to my cPanel I have mistakenly created a new domain name for my hosting and now I cannot log in to my cPanel because it
