2017 Carrera GTA V, 2017 Code Of The West, 2017 Dirty Grandpa, 2017 Grand Theft Auto.. pack of 4 tattoos - <http://onid.Space> Ghosts, Your Fright Photos Here's a new one: The Russians have taken a picture of Earth from the International Space Station, and it's everything you hoped it would be, with a couple of extra features that you didn't plan on. The photograph was taken Sunday afternoon, but it's the most interesting, and best-guessed-at, photograph of the whole ISS era. (We'll be analyzing it more and more as it becomes better known.) It shows Earth from the station at about 135,000 miles up, giving an almost unobstructed view straight down. The most striking image quality is that the sun is very bright, and the brightness of the sun includes at least one of the Moon. The third image on the page is the photo equivalent of that, featuring a full Moon lit by the sun, seen through another high-contrast image of Earth. Look at the temperature of the Sun, on the left of the picture. It appears to be as bright as it is at Earth's surface. The last image, of Earth's highlights, is called a "Milky Way Globular Cluster." The title came from this description: "While viewing the Sun during the M31 solar eclipse, we noticed some apparent imperfections in the images, which we suspect might be due to interference from supernova remnants or other astrophysical phenomena. We suspect this may be caused by small numbers of point sources of light interfering with the large telescope. There are a few stars that have large amounts of interference, so we have superimposed a 'Milky Way Globular Cluster' to see what might be happening." Sometimes I think that high-grade amateur astronomers should have the honor of giving "space ghost" names, like "The Milky Way Globular Cluster" or "The Yellow Stripe." Still, I'm not going to go all Asteroid Belt and claim that this picture is proof that "man will be immortal" or that there is no limit to the distance that humans can travel. (Stargazing is a very conservative form of travel. In fact, after putting a bit of thought into it, the best metaphor I can think of would be that people are moving slower than the speed of light. If there were no limits on travel, the upper limit on travel speed would be the fastest possible 3e33713323
