A: Mozilla's cleaner function is the one to use. Mozilla uses it for that very purpose. A: Windows support: You can use the Microsoft.Windows.FileName class from the Microsoft.VisualBasic.FileIO.FileSystem namespace. Alternatively you can just use the Path.GetFileName method if you can use a.NET framework version 3.5 or higher. There is also a Path.GetFileNameWithoutExtension method if you are restricted to the.NET framework version 1.0. Linux support: If you want to do it on a linux OS you can use the basename command, which is part of the basic utilities package. If you just want to strip the file extension there is a much easier command that exists on all distros: egrep -Po '.*\.\w+\s+\K\S+' A: On Windows, use Path.GetFileName. On Unix, use basename or basename -s. Tom Holland confirms some Deadpool 2 casting news Share This: Tom Holland confirms some Deadpool 2 casting news Holland, who plays Peter Parker in the new film, confirmed that Ryan Reynolds and T.J. Miller were going to be in the film. "T.J. is playing a bad guy. Ryan's playing a good guy," he told Total Film. "I can't tell you who the bad guy is because we haven't worked out the final lineup, but I can tell you that he's super '80s villainous," he said. "I can't tell you who he is, but it's badass." Peyton Reed will direct the sequel, which is expected to be released in 2018, and feature an expanded ensemble cast than the first film. Deadpool will next be seen in X-Men: Apocalypse on May 27, 2016.Q: Replacing the "I" in SQL I have a database with a record like this: John|Mr but I need to replace the "|" character with this "," character.
