standard 614 2005 by the American Society of Mechanical Engineers. Written by Allen “an engineer who worked for Shell, BASF and Phillips.Q: Finding the children in django that have a parent of a certain value I am trying to write a function to find all children where the children's parent id is x. I'm running into the problem of not being able to pull that object. def get_children(self, parent): x = self.models.Parent.objects.filter(parent_id = self.id).first() print x children_obj = x.children.all() for c in children_obj: print c return children_obj When I run this I'm getting the following error: Badly formed SON (type: dict) Please help me figure out what's causing this error. A: The problem is that you are trying to iterate over a dictionary. For better understanding we would need the output of the query to get what you are trying to achieve. You can do what you want using the following approach:

def get_children(self, parent): x = self.models.Parent.objects.filter(parent_id = self.id).first() return [child for child in x.children.all()]

 I am making the assumption that your self.models.Parent.children is actually a list of children. If the children field in your model is a list this should do the trick.

When we only listen to our body, we are only able to understand how to "function". We forget the other aspect of being. We forget that we have wisdom and intuition guiding us. We forget that we are intelligent, capable, capable of facing reality and doing. We forget that our bodies are capable of knowing exactly what we need to do or what to avoid. Listen to the signals your body sends you, listen to the voice of your soul. You will understand why you are here and what you need to do in order to live in your full power. We can't forget about our environment and it's effects. It's been proven that if we don'
