I understand that you have to provide a length but am looking for something slightly more specific. For example, can one do something like this? NSString *originalString = @"Hello World"; NSString *modifiedString = [originalString substringToIndex:5]; A: Go to this link to get exact details about String Appending in iOS http://developer.apple.com/library/ios/#documentation/Cocoa/Reference/Foundation/Classes/NSString_Class/Reference/NSString.html That is not available via direct method. Cyclic nucleotides are presumed to regulate the activity of a wide range of enzymes in mammalian cells. The aim of this study is to examine the functional role of cAMP in cells of the immune system in terms of the complex and coordinated pattern of gene expression characteristic of this lineage. Since cAMP directly regulates the activity of cAMP-dependent kinase, a transcriptional regulatory element in the cell-specific beta-fibrin promoter will be linked to a reporter gene to determine whether this regulation can account for the differential activation of the tissue-specific beta-fibrin gene in the erythroid vs. non-erythroid lineages. Similar experiments, both with the beta-fibrin and CD3 promoters, will be used to investigate whether a distinctive feature of T-cell activation, an apparent requirement for discrete levels of cAMP. Studies using a variety of hematopoietic cell types has also identified a cell-specific cyclic nucleotide-dependent promoter for the c-myb gene, the expression of which correlates with the capacity of the cells to produce hemopoietic growth factors. Such studies will be extended to define the regulatory role of the cAMP-dependent transcriptional activation of the c-myb gene. Finally, a cAMP-dependent, heme-regulated gene regulatory element, recently identified in the d-12 region of the chick oviduct c-myb enhancer, will be characterized in terms of its nucleotide sequence and evolutionary conservation.
