Immigrations and Customs Enforcement (ICE) said Wednesday it will conduct inspections at nearly 150 businesses in 10 states this summer to determine whether they are hiring undocumented workers. ICE spokeswoman Gillian Christensen said the agency will take its time in making a decision about any given company. “We always look to target specific industries,” Christensen said, adding that ICE looks to both big and small businesses. “Businesses are a great partner with us because they have great control of who they hire.” ICE conducts the operations, which are known as “work site audits,” in cooperation with local authorities. 2edc1e01e8
